Stronger Together

Puerto Rico is at an extremely important point of transition, facing the imperatives of recovering from three major disasters in three years, including the pandemic. The Foundation for Puerto Rico has used each crisis as an opportunity to help our communities across the island build back better, stronger and more resilient.

Every year we partner with companies investing in Puerto Rico because we know we are stronger together. The investments companies make in our communities and their markets, have a tremendous positive impact, and when done with nonprofits, communities and other stakeholders, these become Partners for Good.

The economic crisis induced by the pandemic is more dire than that which followed Hurricane Maria. Therefore, the central questions facing many private and corporate foundations today is: Where should we direct our limited time and resources to address the nexus of forces impacting livelihoods, equality and resilience?

FPR’s targeted economic development and resilience programs empower communities with the resources, training, funding, and network they need to improve the local economy from within. We have seen first-hand the power and potential of our communities to bounce back, with the right support.

By organizing meaningful partnerships with companies that share our innovative and collaborative approaches to advancing Puerto Rico’s recovery and development, we believe 2021 can become a year of recovery. Thank you for considering our invitation to become Partner for Good.
